These cases are processed by the Commission under Section 10(1) (f) (g) of the National Commission for Women Act and are referred to appropriate authorities such as the Police/district magistrates, for appropriate action. The Commission sponsers awareness programmes including legal literacy programmes. The Commission launched a Dahej Mukti Abhiyan in 1998 to generate awareness among the youth. It also sponsers the 'Parivarik Mahila Lok Adalat' under the Legal Services Authorities Act where disputes are resolved through mediation.

The Government of India was adopted a National Policy for the Empowerment of Women. The policy reaffirms Government's commitment to deal with all forms of violence against women.

The Department of Women and Child Development and the Social Welfare Board implement information and mass education programmes linked with advocacy and legal literacy to generate public awareness about the issues concerning women and children including the evils of dowry. NGO's activist group at the grass roots and local panchayats are also involved in awareness camps.
